OSBORN HOTEL BURNED. Oxford Hostelry Destroyed at a Loss of $6,000.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ONFORD, N. C., July 19.—The Osborn Hotel here burned, this morning. Very little was saved. The insurance is about $3.50, $1.00 on furniture and $2.500 on building. No one was hurt. It is supposed to have caught from the kitchen.
The loss is about $6,000.

RICHMOND STROKE. Swimmer Recognized Thereby

Far From Home.

Far From Home.

The old gentleman sitting on one of the benches at Gamble's Hill grew reminiscent, tasking of Richmond when he was a boy. The river winding in the moonlight below brought back to his mind his swimming days.

"Whom I was a little shaver," he said, "we used to have names for very swimming hole in the river, I don't know whether the boys have kept them or not. First of all was Hugh Fry Creek, where we learned to swim 'dog fashlon;' then came Little Hell, which got its name from the fact that if you tried to swim through that place and couldn't do it, you'd get yourself out all to pieces on the rocks helow.

"Muse you got through Little Hell, you that place and couldn't do 1, you'd recyourself cut all to pleces on the rocks below.

"After you got through Little Hell you had to swim through Big Hell, which had more rocks still; and if you got seared you'd fall hire Little Hell, too. Last and hardest of all was Heaven, which was the worst place in the river.

"These holes were so full of rapids that they made all the boys swim with a stroke peculiar to Hichmonders. It's a kind of overhand, but it's different from all the other strokes like that, because a man pushes his body forward all the way from the hips.

"Some years ago, when I was at Long Branch, I saw a man swimming that stroke, and I told the party he was a Richmond man. They asked me I knew him, and when I told them I all never seen him before, they asked me I all recognized his stroke, and everybody laughed at me. One of them offered to bet me a basket of wine on the result. We made the bet and appointed two impartial umpires to go up and ask him.

"I had the laugh on the crowd over that basket of wine that night."

ndertaking from loye-making to advertising. It isn't fair-it isn't honest, in the long run. The Times-Dispatch standard is to print no ad. In its Want Columns that is a fake or is unpleasant, or is any way undesirable. The Times-Dispatch Want Ads, are a business directory and they are more. They are a clean and acceptable business directory. Just yesterday we refused a lot of objectionable "matrimonial agency" advertising and we will keep it up. The weather may blow hot as it is or cold as it was, but the Times-Dispatch Want Ads. will remain trustworthy, clean, honest and successful. Read them and see.
